What are the main reasons for the increase in Euroscepticism?

SUGGESTED PROCEDURE:

- Divide the class into groups of 4.
- Every group gets one task sheet.
- Each member of the group is given a corner of the sheet with its two reasons. Each person spends a few minutes preparing supporting arguments that back up these main reasons.
- Each member of the group presents and argues in support of their two reasons ("Loss of national sovereignty is a reason for euroscepticism because...").
- After all four members have presented, the group discusses and agrees on which three reasons they believe to be the most important.
- Class conversation in which each group must tell the class what three reasons they have decided on and present their supporting arguments. ("We believe the inclusion of 12 new member countries to be the most important because...").
- The teacher may tally the reasons mentioned by the different groups, ending the class discussion with an overview of the opinions of the class as a whole.
